

Dear Readers,

ENT disorders cover a wide variety of illnesses ranging from rhinitis, acute otitis media, hearing loss, balance disorders, smell and taste disorders, speech, voice, language disorders and many more.

ENT disorders are one of the major areas where homeopathy has a role to play. In fact, there are many so-called surgical cases which can be treated by homeopathy. While it is impossible to discuss all of the ENT disorders encountered by primary care physicians, it is helpful to have a succinct resource to highlight the common disorders and their homeopathic management. While making this issue we realized that ENT is too vast a topic to be covered in one issue. So we have also thought that we will cover ear, nose and throat disorders in separate issues in the coming year. Please keep this in mind and send us your cases related to these topics to be shared with thousands of readers worldwide through this platform.

In the current issue, we have article from Dr Nilesh Mulay which throws light on the scope of homeopathy in ENT cases. Articles from Dr Jonathan Shore and Dr Harsh Nigam give further information on the role of repertory and judicious use of repertory in ENT cases. In the favorite section of many of our readers, the Old Archives we have taken article by Isaiah Landis where he has illustrated therapeutics of various remedies in different stages of ENT problems.

In this issue we have taken a special article by Dr Larysa Hutsol which gives details of how homeopathy is taught in Ukraine. This article highlights how step by step planned approach leads to better understanding of concepts among the students.

While we are making this issue discussing the ENT problems and their homeopathic management, Homeopathy as a whole receives yet another threat in Britain where a protest march is being done to boycott the use of homeopathy pharmacies and shops which sell homeopathy medicines. The reason being the same, the medicine quantity cannot be ascertained in the homeopathic dilutions. I don't know till when homeopathy will have to bear all this in spite of curing millions of people worldwide. On a second thought, I would say its not their fault, it's just that they don't understand anything till it is black and white. Not just that, if there are millions of cases cured there would be many or rather same number of cases spoilt or made worse by so-called homeopaths. This is another reason why there is always so much opposition to homeopathy, it is very much possible that many of those are not against homeopathy for the sake of it but because some of their known has suffered because of the wrong practice and they are concerned for all the other people. We should always see both sides of the coin, not just one. I am not trying to support them but trying to see reasons other than, just being prejudiced about homeopathy.

So need of the hour for homeopathy is to work or do research in the field of quantum physics which can establish the working of dilutions and more importantly before that we need to lay certain standards for the practice of homeopathy.

In this time when British homeopathy is facing threat, from we have an article Dr Brain Kaplan who writes a worth reading article on battle of British Homeopathy, I would not give any details here and would guide to the page directly.

Let's work each and every day in a way that we contribute to this very science which is giving us all what we have today. Do send me your feedback, I eagerly await for them.
